This is understood to refer to the continuation of children at school beyond a certain age. The same subject is discussed in the statement submitted by the various ministers of religiohas follows: --In many instances the acquisition of a small holding results in the persistent labour of the individual owner, while the younger generation, knowing that their parents possess as much as to furnish necessities, are content to grow up in anything but a thrifty condition. In this respect small holdings do not tend to promote thrift, especially among the younger generation. We are of the opinion that the lack of thrift, and the indifference of the younger generation, might be remedied by the introduction of the subject of agriculture in the school curriculum. The theory of agriculture may be taught by the use of textbooks, or as one of the subjects in the higher standards of the elementary schools; but the present staff of teachers cannot be expected to go beyond that, inasmuch as by the code of education recently inaugurated the teaching power of the schools has been considerably reduced. We are, however, of opinion that further instruction in that branch may be imparted by the appointment, in each parish or district, of a competent itinerary agriculturist, who should visit every school in the parish, and teach the subject. Clearing Forests. 226. Mr. Lascelles drew the attention of the Commission to the evil effects likely to arise from the further...
